

Jobs

1. Discord- I selected Discord as their culture seemed very appealing to me. I like the fact that they offer a summer intern course. I have the basic understanding of backend work but I would definitely have to get better at it. I would have to learn machine learning as well. My goals would be to learn the basic skills of my job then continue to learn to move up to better positions. I do not currently have all the necessary skills for the job.

2. Cisco- I choose Cisco as its one of the bigger tech companies out there. They offer an apprenticeship program that would teach me a lot of the skills I would need to land a job at one of their sites. Currently I don't have the skills needed to get a job here.

3. Nvidia- I choose Nvidia as I like that they don't just focus on gaming. If I was to attempt to get hired on with them I would go for the gaming team as they focus on UI/Ux design and such. I don't currently have the skills needed.

4. Google- Google is one of my fever dreams. I would need to dedicate many more years to the field to even be considered for an entry level spot.

5. Freelance- I choose freelance work due to being able to more or less work at my own pace and take on as much work as I want. I have skills to start doing freelance work right now and the more skills I learn I'll only get better at it.

Alt Jobs

1. Apple- I see apple as one of those shoot for the star jobs. I don't currently have the skills needed to get a foot in the door. Definitely need many more years of education to even consider it. <https://www.apple.com/careers/us/>
2. Tik Tok- Another aim high place. Need to do more schooling to get in here.
